P R E F A C E

It is a matter of great pleasure for us to place before the world of scholars, the Critical Edition of the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the Rāmāyana of Vālmīki. This kāṇḍa has been published in 3 Fascicules, the first one was published in 1967, the second in 1969 and the third in March, 1971. We are glad to note that this kāṇḍa is completed according to schedule before March, 31st 1971

We are thankful to the University Grants Commission for their financial assistance (two-thirds of the expenses) and the Gujarat State Government for their assistance of 20% of the expenses. And we hope that both the U G C. and the State Government will continue to assist the M. S. University of Baroda and this Institute till the whole of Uttarakāṇḍa and the Pratika-Index of all the Kāṇḍas of this Critical Edition are printed and published.

I am especially thankful to Prof Dr. P. L. Vaidya, the learned Editor of this kāṇḍa, whose versatile scholarship and experience of the Critical Editions of the Mahābhārata, the Harivamsa as well as the Ayodhyākāṇḍa of Rāmāyana are well-known to the world of scholars. Prof. Vaidya has been, from the very beginning, our chief friend and guide in this project of the Critical Edition of the Rāmāyana and even at the age of 80 with gradually failing health he had undertaken the task of the Critical Edition of Yuddhakāṇḍa which is now brought to a successful end. Unfortunately, for the last few months he has not been keeping well and hence he has been unable to append his Critical Notes to this kāṇḍa. We postponed the publication of third fascicule for about a month in the hope that Prof Vaidya's health would improve so as to enable him to write out his Critical Notes.

As and when Prof Vaidya is able to write the notes, they will be printed and published as an Appendix to our next Volume.

It would be interesting to note the following remarks of Prof. Vaidya (Vide, his Intro. p. XXIX)—“I believe that the original Rāmāyana consisted of three Kāṇḍas only, viz, the Ayodhyākāṇḍa, Aranyakāṇḍa and Yuddhakāṇḍa. Later the Ayodhyākāṇḍa got split up into Bāla and Ayodhyā, and Aranyakāṇḍa into Aranya, Kiskindhā and Sundara Kāṇḍas, making a total of six Kāṇḍas with a supplement (षट्काण्ड सौत्तरम्)”

Some verses at the end of Sarga 14 of Bālakāṇḍa, Lahore ed., in North-western recension, are almost repeated at the end of Bālakāṇḍa and the Sargas between Sarga 16 (our Cr. ed of Bāla-kāṇḍa) and the beginning of Ayodhyā including especially the Viśvāmitra episode could have been added later. (cf. Lahore ed, Bālakāṇḍa, pp 154 ff. Sarga 14, vv. 20 ff. with Sarga 72, vv. 9-16 p 488 f.) The evidence of our MSS. Ś1 D1-2.5 7.9.12.13 of Bālakāṇḍa, referred to above, will demonstrate this. Thus most of the Bāla after Sarga 17 (of Critical Edition) is a later addition.

इत्यार्षे श्रीरामायणे आदिकान्ये श्रीवाल्मीकीये श्रीमद्युद्धकाण्डे रामाभिषेकप्रकरणे राज्याभिषेकमहोत्सवो नाम [शताधिक] एकविंशत्सर्ग । श्रीरामाय नमः । युद्धकाण्ड समाप्तम् । इडालिकुलसभवेन वरदराजेन वाल्मीकिना सुशोधित पाठमुद्धृत्य विवेकतिलक नाम व्याख्यान कृतवान् नट्टव्याख्यानपाठोक्तम् । रामायणं समाप्तम् ।

अक्षर यत्परिभ्रष्ट मात्राहीन तु यद्भवेत् ।

क्षन्तुमर्हन्ति विद्वांसः कस्य नास्ति व्यतिक्रमः ॥

तृणकण्डुलब्रविष्णुशर्मणा लिखित पुस्तकमिदम् ।

At the end of Gorresio's edition of Yuddhakāṇḍa which follows the N E. recension of the Rāmāyana, it is printed as follows —

इत्यार्षे रामायणे वाल्मीकीये आदिकान्ये चतुर्विंशतिसाहस्र्या सहिताया युद्धकाण्ड समाप्तम् ॥ रामायणं समाप्तम् ॥

Thus there was a tradition that Rāmāyana ended with Yuddha and that Uttara was a supplement

It is not necessary here to go into details of this problem since it has been generally agreed that most of the Bāla and Uttarakāndas are later

I am also thankful to the Vice-Chancellor, M. S. University of Baroda, and the Director, Oriental Institute, Baroda, who are taking keen interest in the progress and completion of this project

I am thankful to all the members of the staff of the Rāmāyana Department without whose sincere cooperation the work of publication would not have continued so nicely. I am especially thankful to Shri R. J. Patel, Manager, M. S. University of Baroda Press, who has been taking special care and interest in printing of the different Volumes

INTRODUCTION

THIS first Critical Edition of the Yuddhakāṇḍa of Vālmiki's Rāmāyaṇa is based on four selected printed editions, thirty-four selected manuscripts in several different scripts, viz., the Śāradā, Newārī, Maithilī, Bengālī, Devanāgarī, Telugu, Grantha and Malayālam procured from different parts of India and abroad, Ksemendra's Epitome called the Rāmāyana Mañjarī and several commentaries from the oldest available of Uḍḍiṛi Varadarāja. The material available on the Rāmāyana is really very vast, and the organisers and the Editor have to ignore several printed editions for which the reader is referred to Shri N. A. Gore's Bibliography of the Rāmāyana, as well as second rate or dilapidated or damaged manuscripts. All the same, the Editor desires to assure the reader that he has utilized every important work which was useful one way or another for the fixing of the text of the Yuddhakāṇḍa. We had to ignore manuscripts in Nandināgarī because they were found not to yield material not found in Telugu, and Assamese and Oriyā manuscripts because they also did not differ from Bengālī. The material actually used is detailed below.

A. Printed Editions.

As stated above, there are several printed editions of the whole of Rāmāyana current in different parts of India in different scripts such as Devanāgarī, Bengālī, Telugu, Grantha and Malayālam. Out of these we have selected the following four, all in Devanāgarī script. They are

(1) Lahore Edition (L) Yuddhakāṇḍa edited by Shri Vishvabandhu Shastri, Lahore, 1944, D A V College Sanskrit Series, No. 19

(2) Gaspère Gorresio (G) The Rāmāyana, Vol. V, Yuddhakāṇḍa, Paris, 1850

(3) Shrīmad Vālmiki Rāmāyaṇa (according to Southern readings), Vol. II containing Sundara, Yuddha and Uttara Kāṇḍas, edited by Pandit T. R. Krishnacharya, and published by Madhva Vilasa Book Depot, Kumbakonam, second edition, 1930 (K)

(4) Vālmiki Rāmāyana (with the three commentaries, Tilaka, Śiromaṇi and Bhūṣana), Vol. VI, Yuddhakāṇḍa, edited by Shastri Shrinivas Katti Mudholkar, published by the Gujarati Printing Press, Bombay, 1919 (B)

B. Manuscripts

Out of a very large number of manuscripts of the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the Rāmāyana, we have selected the following 34 manuscripts. These MSS are written, as in the case of the first five Kāṇḍas, in the principal scripts of India, namely, Śāradā, Newārī, Maithilī, Bengālī, Devanāgarī, Telugu, Grantha and Malayālam. We have ignored MSS in Assamese, Oriyā and Nandināgarī, because no independent and good MSS in these scripts were available to us. Of the 34 MSS used for the Yuddhakāṇḍa 14 MSS are common to Kāṇḍas 1-6, 4 (D<sub>1</sub> + T<sub>3</sub> M<sub>3</sub>) are common to Kāṇḍas 4, 5 and 6, while 2 (V<sub>1</sub> D<sub>1</sub>) are common to Kāṇḍas 3 to 6. Two MSS (B<sub>1</sub> M<sub>2</sub>) are common to Kāṇḍas 5 and 6, two (D<sub>10</sub> 12) are common to 1, 4-6, and one (D<sub>7</sub>) is common to Kāṇḍas 1, 3-5. One MS (D<sub>2</sub>) is common to the Kāṇḍas 3, 4 and 6, while one (D<sub>7</sub>) is common to Kāṇḍas 3, 5 and 6. Seven new MSS (Ś<sub>1</sub> V<sub>2</sub> B<sub>2</sub> + D<sub>13</sub> M<sub>4</sub>) are utilized for this Kāṇḍa. We have thus selected MSS which may be said to be fairly representative of different periods and they range from A.D. 1020 to A.D. 1841.

Ś<sub>1</sub>

Baroda, Oriental Institute, No. 14061. Undated. The MS was purchased for the Institute by Dr. S. N. Sharma of Shrinagar. Thin unglazed paper, size 12½" × 7", Śāradā script.

The MS is complete in seven Kāṇḍas, total number of folios for Yuddhakāṇḍa being 97. Folios 70-76 (i.e., the portion from 6.33.13 to 6.102.50 of our Critical Text) are missing. The folio has 18 lines to a page and about 46 to 53 letters to a line. Margins are unruled. Sargas and stanzas are not numbered. Sargas 1 to 15 of our Critical Text of Yuddha appear at the end of Sundarākāṇḍa as its part. A single dāṇḍa demarcates both the halves of the stanza. Colophons, bearing significant Sarga names, are generally daubed over with red chalk or yellow powder. Very few marginal notes. Corrections are few, and they are pr m. Stanzas are at times omitted. Transpositions of stanzas are occasionally noticed. The MS is fairly old. Writing fairly legible and correct. Parasavarna instead of anusvāra is generally used. No prsthāmātrās are noticed. The MS seems to have been written by two scribes. Though the Kāṇḍa is not dated, it seems to be a late exemplar.

The MS represents the NW version.

The following star-passages are found exclusively in this MS, viz., 3655, 3661 and 3663 (3).

Ś<sub>1</sub>

New Delhi, in private possession of Dr Lokesh Chandra, Director, International Academy of Indian Culture. Unnumbered. Dated Samvat 58 (A D 1885). Written on paper, size 13 8" × 7 2". Śāradā script.

The MS is complete in seven Kāṇḍas. As it was obtained very recently, the MS has been utilized from Sarga 11 of the Critical Text of Yuddhakāṇḍa. The total number of folios for Yuddhakāṇḍa is 125. The folio has 15 lines to a page and about 50 letters to a line. Margins are unruled. Stanzas are not numbered, while Sargas are numbered. The total number of Sargas of Yuddhakāṇḍa is 112. Sargas 1-15 of our Critical Text are relegated, as in Ś<sub>1</sub>, to Sundara in this MS. There is no device used to mark the Ślokaṛdha or even a Śloka. Colophons are coloured red and give suitable Sarga names. No marginalia noticed. Corrections are very few and are found pr m. Omissions of stanzas are noticed in some places. A number of stanzas are transposed. The MS is old, some folios being moth-eaten. Hand-writing is nice, with few errors. The scribe writes स्म as म, for instance, पित्रे स्म as पित्रे म. The rules of Samdhi are generally observed. No prsthāmātrās are noticed. The whole MS is written by a single hand, only the post-colophon entry, giving the genealogy of the scribe given at the end of Uttarakāṇḍa appears to have been written by another person.

The post-colophon entry at the end Uttarakāṇḍa seems to give the date of the entire MS as follows:

ॐ श्रीगुप्तसवत् । ५८ आ सुदि नवम्या बुधे ॥

This probably refers to the Saptarsi Samvat 58 which is equivalent to A D. 1885.

The MS represents the NW version.

No exclusive star-passages are found in this MS.

The question of sudden exuberance of the poetic mind of the scribe, or of the change of his exemplar may be the reason for it, but it cannot be treated exhaustively here

Chundampatta (via Pattambi), South Malbar, in private possession (of C Chitrabhanu Nambudiri) Unnumbered and undated Written on palm-leaves, size 27½" × 2" Malayālam script.

The MS is complete in seven Kāṇḍas and has been utilized previously for the Critical Edition of Kīṣkindhā and Sundara. Folios 149 to 209 comprise the subject-matter of the Yuddhakāṇḍa. The folio has 12 to 13 lines to a page and 135 to 145 letters to a line. Sargas are numbered in words and the total number of Sargas of the Yuddhakāṇḍa amounts to 131. The entire MS. is from the pen of a single scribe. For details, vide Sundarakāṇḍa, Introduction, p. XXII. The MS is undated, however, it seems to belong to a relatively modern period.

The MS represents the S recension.

The following star-passages are found exclusively in this MS, viz, 1, 123, 131(A), 1219, 3321 and 3698 (6)

M<sub>5</sub>

Trivandram, University of Kerala Manuscripts Library, No. 13336 Undated Written on palm-leaves, size 19" × 2" Malayālam script

The codex contains Bāla, Ayodhyā, Kīṣkindhā, Yuddha and Uttara Kāṇḍas only. Folios 195 to 316 comprise the subject-matter of the Yuddhakāṇḍa. ### TESTIMONIA

(A) The Commentaries

There are a number of commentaries available on the text of the Rāmāyana, and its various recensions and versions. The number of commentaries on the text of S recension is large and range from Udāri Varadarāja (earlier than A.D. 1250), Rāmānuja (14th century), Maheśvaratīrtha (A.D. 1550), Govindarāja (A.D. 1600), Katakayogindra (A.D. 1650), and Nāgeśa Bhatta (A.D. 1700).

All these commentaries on S recension have been fully used and variant readings as well as pāthāntaras recorded in them are noted in our Critical Apparatus. All these six commentators hail from South India and comment on the text of Southern recension of the Rāmāyana. The Bengali commentator (date ?) Lolānātha Cakravartī has, however, commented upon the Bengali version of the Rāmāyana. He very often refers to Vimalabodha and Sarvajña-Nārāyana (both between A D 1100 and 1300) as the old commentators of both the Rāmāyana and the Mahābhārata, and quotes from their commentaries on the Rāmāyana. These commentaries, however, are not yet traced anywhere.

(B) Epitomes

Ksemendra, the Kāśmīrian poet of circa A D 1046 composed, among other works, an epitome of Vālmiki's Rāmāyana in about 6200 stanzas. Of these, some 1400 stanzas summarise the portion of the Yuddhakāṇḍa of Vālmiki's work, as given in our Critical Text. It is clear that Ksemendra had before him the NW version of the Rāmāyana as can be proved from a lack of reference to the Ādityahṛdayastotra which, thus, constitutes a feature of the S recension. The main episodes of the Yuddhakāṇḍa, all figure in Ksemendra's Epitome. The Editor of the Yuddhakāṇḍa has utilized this Epitome to corroborate the correspondence of incidents only and not for the wording of the Critical Text.

Among other items under the head of Testimonia, we may mention the Rāmopākhyāna of the Mahābhārata (Mbh 3 258-275), which, in my opinion, is the oldest and ungarbed version of the Rāma episode, as well as other works of bardic literature such as the Visṇu, Agni and Padma Purāṇas.

It will be seen from the above description of the MSS, commentaries and Epitomes that I have ransacked and selected almost every available MS which, I thought, would help me to constitute a Critical Text. Almost each and every MS. used has some special feature of its own, and all of them, taken together, go to make up the Ur-text, as far as the available stock of MSS can take us back. The Critical Apparatus may appear somewhat loaded as a result of my selection of MSS, but I think it was necessary in the interest of scholarship.

Recensions and Versions

The above material roughly falls into two major groups of recensions, viz, Northern and Southern. Some MSS, however, particularly of the Devanāgarī group, are divided among themselves, some snaring characteristics of Northern recension and others of Southern recension. The use of N and S, thus, in the case of these MSS is not quite accurate, but the Editor found himself helpless in classifying them into a definite recension. Similarly, a Malayālam MS, M<sub>2</sub>, was found to share characteristic of N recension, in addition to its own specialities. MSS of this type, may rather be designated as mixed versions which may have their originals contaminated.

The Northern group of MSS includes those in Śāradā, Newārī or Nepālī, Bengālī and Devanāgarī scripts. The Southern group contains MSS in Devanāgarī, Telugu, Grantha and Malayālam scripts—M<sub>2</sub> belongs to a special group. It is a mixed version sharing the characteristics of Newārī and Bengālī on the one hand and of Telugu and Grantha versions on the other. Over and above these traits, this MS has 80 star-passages peculiar or exclusive to itself. The pedigree of MSS on page III makes the classification into recensions and versions quite clear.

Text-constitution

Although the principles of text-constitution of the Rāmāyana have been indicated in the introductions to all the previous Kāṇḍas, I should like to restate them here for ready reference. The main principle on which the constitution of our Critical Text is based, is that there should be a full agreement in substance between all recensions and versions. Whatever extra matter is noticed in MSS is not considered to be authentic or belonging to the oldest core of the text. This principle has resulted in giving in our edition a very large number of star-passages totalling 3711 with 7143 lines. In other words, while our Critical Text consists of 4435 units of stanzas (a few three-lined and fewer still one-lined), the number of star-passages for this text is 3711 with 7143 lines, out of which 769 are substitute passages. It means that in a Critical Text of 4435 stanzas of the Yuddhakāṇḍa, as many as 2942 passages are inserted by a generation of bards during the text-transmission through centuries. Besides, there are 76 longer passages relegated to App I containing 7310 lines. Further, individual MSS. have star-passages which are exclusive to them. The number of such exclusive star-passages is 483, there being only 4 MSS, viz, Ś2 D10 D11 and D12 which do not contain a single exclusive star-passage. On the contrary, D13 has 93 passages and M2 80. I have given the above details just to show how difficult the task of the editor was in fixing his Critical Text of the Kāṇḍa.

The Starting Point of Yuddhakāṇḍa

We have adopted the starting point of the Yuddhakāṇḍa as in Southern recension. The first 15 Sargas in the Critical Edition are found as a concluding part of the Sundarakāṇḍa in the Northern recension. In fact, the division of MSS into N and S recensions of Yuddhakāṇḍa is determined on the ground whether the first 15 Sargas of our Critical Text figure in Sundara or Yuddha Kāṇḍas. Considering the nature of these 15 Sargas, it may be stated that they belong to a topic dealing with the preparation of waging war by Rāma with Rāvana. To borrow the analogy of the parvan division of the Mahābhārata, these 15 Sargas correspond to the Udyogaparvan of that Epic. If the reader cares to examine the Critical Apparatus of the Yuddhakāṇḍa, particularly the records under colophons, he will be surprised to find that that particular Sarga, according to that MS, belonged to Udyoga as against Lankākāṇḍa or Yuddhakāṇḍa. Now, Udyoga or preparation for a war-fare can be more appropriately considered as a part of Yuddhakāṇḍa rather than that of Sundarakāṇḍa, which, in my opinion, is a part of Aranyakāṇḍa. For, I believe that the original Rāmāyana consisted of three Kāṇḍas only, viz, the Ayodhyākāṇḍa, Aranyakāṇḍa and Yuddhakāṇḍa. Later the Ayodhyākāṇḍa got split up into Bāla and Ayodhyā, and Aranyakāṇḍa into Aranya, Kiskindhā and Sundara Kāṇḍas, making a total of six Kāṇḍas with a supplement (पट्टकाण्ड सोत्तरम्). So, originally these 15 Sargas must have belonged to Yuddhakāṇḍa. It may be noted here that B1 of N recension begins Yuddhakāṇḍa with Sarga 13 and D2 with Sarga 6 of the Critical text, showing a sort of wavering in the mind of copyists of these MSS.

Bardic Poetry and Its Characteristics*

It is my firm belief that the Rāmāyana, the Mahābhārata and the Purāṇas form a class of literature by themselves, and should be styled as Bardic literature. The main characteristic of this literature is that originally it consisted of small songs, ballads and even stray verses called Gāthā nārāsamsī, and continued to be sung by traditional bards and transmitted by them to succeeding generation by oral tradition. These songs or ballads later developed into Epics, Purāṇas and early Kāvya. Further its contents had a very fluid wording, emphasis being laid on contents rather than on expression or words. These expressions or words were capable of being substituted by different expressions provided the meaning remained the same. Further, these original songs were composed in the form of a verse which also was equally fluid and simple to compose and remember. There is a very large number of standard verse-fillers with which the bard is to equip himself. These songs or ballads were also capable of being expanded or even abridged according to the interest the audience shows in the bard's recitation. The extent of an episode becomes shorter or longer on account of these circumstances, and both shorter and longer versions get recorded at the stage of their being reduced to writing Usually that version is reduced to writing which is current in the family tradition of a particular bard of that particular region

It is now an admitted fact that both the Epics of India, the Mahābhārata and the Rāmāyaṇa, were in early ages transmitted by oral tradition Vyāsa is said to have composed the Mahābhārata and narrated or taught it to his five pupils, who, each one of them, had a separate Samhitā of his own (संहितास्तै वृधक्त्वेन भारतस्य प्रकल्पिताः) Of these five Samhitās of the Mahābhārata, we possess the full text of Vaiśampāyana's Samhitā only transmitted through Lomaharsana sūta and his disciples like Śaunaka If we consider the volume of variations which is in the Samhitā of a single text-tradition of Vaiśampāyana alone, we will simply stagger at the idea of variations which might have gathered round if the Samhitās of all the five pupils of Vyāsa had come to our hand, and perplexities and problems of textual criticism created for the critical editor of the Mahābhārata, keeping all along in mind the fact that the Mahābhārata is styled as Itihāsa while the Rāmāyaṇa is styled as an epic poem.

The case of text-transmission of the Rāmāyaṇa as an epic poem is not much different, though not of the same dimension Like the sage Vyāsa for the Mahābhārata, we have the sage Vālmīki for the Rāmāyaṇa as its author. He had only two disciples Lava and Kuśa whom he taught the poem It is said that they first sang it in the court of Rāma. It must then have been committed to memory by several bards and sung to people in regions far and wide In the course of this propagation of the Rāmāyaṇa, the bards must have added and even altered the story in a number of ways in the direction of its wording or even contents These recitations of bards got localised, and when they were reduced to writing, they assumed the form of recensions and versions current in that particular locality In the case of the Rāmāyaṇa there are found three or four recensions, viz., North-Western, North-Eastern, Central or Western and Southern, each recension being further divided into several versions pure and mixed In the case of the Mahābhārata there were only two recensions N and S, of which N was found to be more authentic while S was found to contain later elements It was, therefore, easy for the editors of the Mahābhārata to accept N text as the principal text and S as secondary text But in the case of the Rāmāyaṇa, the above method could not be found workable as there were three or even four recensions available The late Professor G H BHATT, the Editor of the Bālakāṇḍa of the Rāmāyaṇa, was forced to abandon the method adopted for the Critical Edition of the Mahābhārata, and evolve a new method to be used for the Critical Edition for the Rāmāyaṇa He, therefore, had to decide which of the three or four recensions, on the whole, seemed to be older His view was, and it was right, that the S recension of the Rāmāyaṇa contained, on the whole, a more archaic text, though it was also inflated, and decided that it was more suitable for being adopted as the main text, omitting from it portions which were not supported by other recensions I think the scholars will generally agree with the soundness of this principle In my own case, I have adopted the S recension for my principal text, provided its contents are supported by NW, NE and W recensions The result, in my opinion, enables me to reach a text, based on such agreement and difference, which is definitely the oldest I may point out that although I have adopted S as my principal text, I did not hesitate to eliminate from it portion known as Ādityahṛdaya (App I No 65) and portion relating to the stoppage of the Puṣpaka Vimāna, at the behest of Sītā, in the region of Kiṣkindhā, to collect the Vānara ladies and take them to Ayodhyā for witnessing the coronation of Rāma (vide App I No 72), because these events did not get corroboration from NW, NE or W recension It is thus clear that these portions did not belong to the original and genuine core of the Rāmāyaṇa

In the Mahābhārata as well as in the Rāmāyaṇa, Vyāsa and Vālmīki have used two principal metres, viz., the Anuṣṭubh and the Tristubh-Jagatī, the latter Indravajrā, Upendravajrā, Upajāti, Vamśastha, Aupacchandasiḥ and their mixtures These metres are capable of being easily handled by bards The bards use a number of expressions to keep the versification correct or as flawless as possible. The Samhitās of the Epics and Purāṇas transmitted by these bards, were not, like the Vedas, Śabda-pradhāna, but arthapradhāna, and hence change of a word here and there did not matter much to the bard provided the contents of his narrative or the theme remained the same and versification smooth. The metres, as pointed out above, used in the epic, are easy to admit synonymous words of the same metrical quality. By way of illustration, I pick up a few such words महातेजा, महाराज-महाराज, महाभाग-महाभाग, महाबाहु-महाबाहु, महावीर्य-महावीर्य, महासत्त्व-महासत्त्व (all suited for the first half of Anuṣṭubh) and महातपा, महाबल-महाबल, महायशः, महाद्युति-महाद्युते, महामति-महामते (suitable for the second half of Anuṣṭubh). The reader will meet hundreds of instances making use of these and similar expressions. I need not, therefore, emphasize the promiscuous use of such expressions in the Epics. Besides, there is a group of expressions which may be termed as verse fillers, च, वै, तु, हि, इ, सः, but the group is not restricted to these expletives, there are other expressions like राजन्, नृप-नृप, वीर-वीर, प्रभु-विभु, प्रभो-विभो, भद्र ते, भारत, कौरव, जनेश्वर-जनेश्वर, नरेश्वर-नरेश्वर, नराधिप-नराधिप, कुरुसत्तम, कुरुनन्दन, यदुनन्दन, यदुसत्तम, भरतर्षभ, क्षत्रियर्षभ for the Anuṣṭubh metre, and नरेन्द्रसूनु, नरेन्द्रपुत्र, जनेन्द्रसूनु, जनेन्द्रपुत्र for the Triṣṭubh metre. It should be noted that such verse-filling expressions could be expanded to the full length of a pāda, e.g. यशोदानन्दवर्धन-न, कौसल्यानन्दवर्धन-न, शतशोऽथ सहस्रश. I have in view a set of some funny expressions like रावणस्य महात्मन and राघवस्य महात्मन used as verse-fillers where the word महात्मनः has to be used ironically in the case of Rāvana and normally in the case of Rāma. When, therefore, varying traditions of bards reach the stage of writing, one tradition of MSS uses one and the other its counterpart.

There are a few other devices which the bard has to resort to in his recitation. He cannot strictly follow the rules of grammar and syntax, because he is primarily to look to versification. He, therefore, uses Parasmaipada for Ātmanepada of verbs and vice versa, he drops augment a of the past tense, he uses nominative and accusative plural forms of feminine nouns promiscuously, he may not strictly observe rules of Samdhi and may even use expletives like च, तु, हि unnecessarily to avoid hiatus, he may even leave sentences incomplete, he may not use correctly active and passive constructions, and may commit the flaw of anacoluthon. These and other similar features of epic poetry go to prove that texts transmitted by oral tradition have a wide variation in their wording. This is the main reason why epics and purāṇas abound in various readings, transpositions of phrases and substitutions or parallel versions. The bards in their enthusiasm, particularly when their audience is appreciative or otherwise, go on expanding or shortening descriptions of events by filling in details which may happen to be omitted in other versions. The additional passages and episodes are not peculiar to any particular recension, but are found in all recensions and versions. The fluidity of readings of individual words, expressions, incidents, transpositions, all go to indicate that such oral traditions were more than one. I need not repeat that the traditional extent of the text of Yuddhakāṇḍa has only 5710 stanzas, while my constituted Critical Text contains only 4435 stanzas. The total number of star-passages included in the Critical Apparatus is over 3700 with more than 7000 lines or 3500 stanzas and that of passages relegated to App. I is 76 with 7335 lines, equal to 3668 stanzas.

The Rāmopākhyāna and the Rāmāyana

Before finishing my Introduction to the Yuddhakāṇḍa, the last Kāṇḍa of the real and original Rāmāyana, I should like to refer to a point not touched by my predecessors. The point refers to the question of the relative chronology of the Rāmopākhyāna as found in the Mbh. 3 258-275 of the Critical Edition, and the Rāmāyana in its Critical Edition, now before the reader for the first time. The Rāmopākhyāna in the Critical Edition contains 18 adhyāyas and 724 stanzas or 1448 lines. It narrates the story of Rāma upto his coronation only, i.e., upto the end of the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the Rāmāyana. The first three stanzas of the Rāmopākhyāna contain a sort of summary of the Ākhyāna, and run as follows:

प्राप्तमप्रतिमं दुःखं रामेण भरतर्षभ ।
रक्षसा जानकीं तस्य हृता भार्या बलीयसा ॥
आश्रमाद्वाक्षसेन्द्रेण रावणेन विहायसा ।
मायामास्थाय तरसा हृत्वा गृध्रं जटायुषम् ॥
प्रत्याजहार तां रामः सुग्रीवबलमाश्रितः ।
बद्धां सेतुं समुद्रस्य दग्ध्वा लङ्कां शिवैः शरैः ॥

reduced to writing. Usually that version is reduced to writing which is current in the family tradition of a particular bard of that particular region.

It is now an admitted fact that both the Epics of India, the Mahābhārata and the Rāmāyaṇa, were in early ages transmitted by oral tradition. Vyāsa is said to have composed the Mahābhārata and narrated or taught it to his five pupils, who, each one of them, had a separate Samhitā of his own (संहितास्तै पृथक्त्वेन भारतस्य प्रकल्पिताः) Of these five Samhitās of the Mahābhārata, we possess the full text of Vaiṣampāyana's Samhitā only transmitted through Lomahaṛṣana sūta and his disciples like Śaunaka. If we consider the volume of variations which is in the Samhitā of a single text-tradition of Vaiṣampāyana alone, we will simply stagger at the idea of variations which might have gathered round if the Samhitās of all the five pupils of Vyāsa had come to our hand, and perplexities and problems of textual criticism created for the critical editor of the Mahābhārata, keeping all along, in mind the fact that the Mahābhārata is styled as Itihāsa while the Rāmāyaṇa is styled as an epic poem.

The case of text-transmission of the Rāmāyaṇa as an epic poem is not much different, though not of the same dimension. Like the sage Vyāsa for the Mahābhārata, we have the sage Vālmīki for the Rāmāyaṇa as its author. He had only two disciples Lava and Kuśa whom he taught the poem. It is said that they first sang it in the court of Rāma. It must then have been committed to memory by several bards and sung to people in regions far and wide. In the course of this propagation of the Rāmāyaṇa or Rāmāyaṇa, the bards must have added and even altered the story in a number of ways in the direction of its wording or even contents. These recitations of bards got localised, and when they were reduced to writing, they assumed the form of recensions and versions current in that particular locality. In the case of the Rāmāyaṇa there are found three or four recensions, viz., North-Western, North-Eastern, Central or Western and Southern, each recension being further divided into several versions pure and mixed. In the case of the Mahābhārata there were only two recensions N and S, of which N was found to be more authentic while S was found to contain later elements. It was, therefore, easy for the editors of the Mahābhārata to accept N text as the principal text and S as secondary text. But in the case of the Rāmāyaṇa, the above method could not be found workable as there were three or even four recensions available. The late Professor G. H. BHATT, the Editor of the Bālakāṇḍa of the Rāmāyaṇa, was forced to abandon the method adopted for the Critical Edition of the Mahābhārata, and evolve a new method to be used for the Critical Edition for the Rāmāyaṇa. He, therefore, had to decide which of the three or four recensions, on the whole, seemed to be older. His view was, and it was right, that the S recension of the Rāmāyaṇa contained, on the whole, a more archaic text, though it was also inflated, and decided that it was more suitable for being adopted as the main text, omitting from it portions which were not supported by other recensions. I think the scholars will generally agree with the soundness of this principle. In my own case, I have adopted the S recension for my principal text, provided its contents are supported by NW, NE and W recensions. The result, in my opinion, enables me to reach a text, based on such agreement and difference, which is definitely the oldest. I may point out that although I have adopted S as my principal text, I did not hesitate to eliminate from it portion known as Ādityahṛdaya (App I No. 65) and portion relating to the stoppage of the Puṣpaka Vimāna, at the behest of Sītā, in the region of Kīṣkīndhā, to collect the Vānara ladies and take them to Ayodhyā for witnessing the coronation of Rāma (vide App I No. 72), because these events did not get corroboration from NW, NE or W recension. It is thus clear that these portions did not belong to the original and genuine core of the Rāmāyaṇa.

In the Mahābhārata as well as in the Rāmāyaṇa, Vyāsa and Vālmīki have used two principal metres, viz., the Anuṣṭubh and the Triṣṭubh-Jagatī, the latter Indravajrā, Upendravajrā, Upajātī, Vamśastha, Aupacchandasiṅga and their mixtures. These metres are capable of being easily handled by bards. The bards use a number of expressions to keep the versification correct or as flawless as possible. The Samhitās of the Epics and Purāṇas transmitted by these bards, were not, like the Vedas, Śabda-pradhāna, but arthapradhāna, and hence change of a word here and there did not matter much to the bard provided the contents of his narrative or the theme remained the same and versification smooth. The metres, as pointed out above, used in the epic, are easy to admit synonymous words of the same metrical quality. By way of illustration, I pick up a few such words महातेजा, महाराज-महाराज, महाभाग-महाभाग, महाबाहु-महाबाहु, महावीर्य-महावीर्य, महासत्त्व-महासत्त्व (all suited for the first half of Anuṣṭubh) and महातपा, महाबल-महाबल, महायशः, महाश्रुति-महाश्रुते, महामतिः-महामते (suitable for the second half of Anuṣṭubh). The reader will meet hundreds of instances making use of these and similar expressions. I need not, therefore, emphasize the promiscuous use of such expressions in the Epics. Besides, there is a group of expressions which may be termed as verse-fillers, च, वै, तु, हि, ह, स्म, but the group is not restricted to these expletives, there are other expressions like राजन्, नृप-नृप, वीर-वीर, प्रभु-विभु, प्रभो-विभो भद्र ते, भारत, कौरव, जनेश्वर-जनेश्वर, नरेश्वर-नरेश्वर, नराधिप-नराधिप, कुरुसत्तम, कुरुनन्दन, यदुनन्दन, यदुसत्तम, भरतर्षभ, धृत्रियर्षभ for the Anuṣṭubh metre, and नरेन्द्रसूनु, नरेन्द्रपुत्र, जनेन्द्रसूनु, जनेन्द्रपुत्र for the Triṣṭubh metre. It should be noted that such verse-filling expressions could be expanded to the full length of a pāda, e.g. यशोदानन्दवर्धन-न, कौसल्यानन्दवर्धन-न, शतशोऽथ सहस्रश. I have in view a set of some funny expressions like रावणस्य महात्मनः and राघवस्य महात्मनः used as verse-fillers where the word महात्मनः has to be used ironically in the case of Rāvana and normally in the case of Rāma. When, therefore, varying traditions of bards reach the stage of writing, one tradition of MSS uses one and the other its counterpart.

There are a few other devices which the bard has to resort to in his recitation. He cannot strictly follow the rules of grammar and syntax, because he is primarily to look to versification. He, therefore, uses Parasmaipada for Ātmanepada of verbs and vice versa, he drops augment a of the past tense, he uses nominative and accusative plural forms of feminine nouns promiscuously, he may not strictly observe rules of Samdhi and may even use expletives like च, तु, हि unnecessarily to avoid hiatus, he may even leave sentences incomplete, he may not use correctly active and passive constructions, and may commit the flaw of anacoluthon. These and other similar features of epic poetry go to prove that texts transmitted by oral tradition have a wide variation in their wording. This is the main reason why epics and purāṇas abound in various readings, transpositions of phrases and substitutions or parallel versions. The bards in their enthusiasm, particularly when their audience is appreciative or otherwise, go on expanding or shortening descriptions of events by filling in details which may happen to be omitted in other versions. The additional passages and episodes are not peculiar to any particular recension, but are found in all recensions and versions. The fluidity of readings of individual words, expressions, incidents, transpositions, all go to indicate that such oral traditions were more than one. I need not repeat that the traditional extent of the text of Yuddhakāṇḍa has only 5710 stanzas, while my constituted Critical Text contains only 4435 stanzas. The total number of star-passages included in the Critical Apparatus is over 3700 with more than 7000 lines or 3500 stanzas and that of passages relegated to App. I is 76 with 7335 lines, equal to 3668 stanzas.

The Rāmopākhyāna and the Rāmāyana

Before finishing my Introduction to the Yuddhakāṇḍa, the last Kāṇḍa of the real and original Rāmāyana, I should like to refer to a point not touched by my predecessors. The point refers to the question of the relative chronology of the Rāmopākhyāna as found in the Mbh. 3.258-275 of the Critical Edition, and the Rāmāyana in its Critical Edition, now before the reader for the first time. The Rāmopākhyāna in the Critical Edition contains 18 adhyāyas and 724 stanzas or 1448 lines. It narrates the story of Rāma upto his coronation only, i.e., upto the end of the Yuddhakāṇḍa of the Rāmāyana. The first three stanzas of the Rāmopākhyāna contain a sort of summary of the Ākhyāna, and run as follows

प्राप्तमप्रतिमं दुःखं रामेण भरतर्षभ ।
रक्षसा जानकी तस्य हृता भार्या बलीयसा ॥
आश्रमाद्वाक्षसेन्द्रेण रावणेन विहायसा ।
मायामास्थाय तरसा हत्वा गृध्रं जटायुषम् ॥
प्रत्याजहार ता राम सुग्रीवबलमाश्रित ।
बद्धा सेतुं समुद्रस्य दग्ध्वा लङ्का शितैः शरैः ॥

The story in the Mbh is narrated by the sage Mārkaṇḍeya to Yudhiṣṭhira at a time when Draupadi was forcibly abducted by Jayadratha, and was recovered by Bhīma. When Yudhiṣṭhira asks Mārkaṇḍeya whether there was any unfortunate person like him who had lost his kingdom and wife, Mārkaṇḍeya narrates to him an old episode of Rāma who had lost both his kingdom and wife while he was, like him, in exile for a period of fourteen years. It thus appears that the narration of Rāmopākhyāna to Yudhiṣṭhira by the sage was quite appropriate to the occasion. There are no traces to suggest that the episode could be an interpolation in the Mbh. Being thus a genuine part of the Mahābhārata, it is much older than the poem of Vālmiki, and being a part of an Itihāsa, it is much more trustworthy than a Kāvya. Scholars from Weber and Jacobi down to the late Dr. Sukthankar have held different views about the relative antiquity of the Rāmopākhyāna and the Rāmāyana, some holding that the former is an abridgement of the Rāmāyana and consequently later than the Rāmāyana. The question, therefore, of the relative chronology requires a fresh examination so as to settle it finally. My own considered view is that the Rāmopākhyāna is centuries older than the Rāmāyana and being a part of the Itihāsa has stated the facts, while the Rāmāyana being a Kāvya is much later than the Rāmopākhyāna, and has enlarged, modified and embellished the narrative as it occurs in the Rāmopākhyāna. It must be borne in mind that an abridgement of a work is more faithful to its original than an enlargement of the same. I note below a few interesting points which are peculiar to the Rāmopākhyāna, but not referred to or differently referred to in the Rāmāyana. I shall also point out the elements in the Rāmakathā which are innovations of Vālmiki, so that the reader might solve the question for himself.

1. The Rāmopākhyāna makes no mention of Viśvāmitra, who, according to Bālakāṇḍa of the Rāmāyana, took away young Rāma and Lakṣmana and gave them training in missiles, the marriage of Sītā with Rāma did not take place in the presence of Viśvāmitra, but was arranged by Tvastr. In the Rāmāyana, on the other hand, Viśvāmitra took young Rāma and Lakṣmana, trained them in missiles, took them to Janaka's court, where after breaking of Śiva's bow, Rāma was married to Sītā. It is thus clear that the entire episode of Viśvāmitra was an innovation of the poet Vālmiki and introduced by him in the older and similar Rāmopākhyāna.

2. In the Rāmopākhyāna, there is no reference to the episode of Ahalyā and her restoration to life at the touch of Rāma's feet. This episode also in the Rāmāyana is an innovation of Vālmiki.

3. The Rāmopākhyāna mentions three times an old Rākṣasa minister of Rāvana, Avindhya by name, who is well-disposed towards Rāma. He once consoles Sītā by giving her news about the well-being of Rāma and Lakṣmana and assuring her that they would soon release her from detention in Rāvana's custody, second time he prevents Rāvana from killing Sītā by pointing to him that a crowned king like Rāvana should not kill a woman, already in imprisonment, and third time, he brought Sītā to Rāma after Rāvana's death. Rāma is said to have rewarded him for his good offices after his coronation for the part he played in the recovery of Sītā. Trijatā is mentioned in both the Rāmopākhyāna and the Rāmāyana. Avindhya is thus ignored in the Rāmāyana as Vālmiki thought him to be not so important.

4. In Rāmopākhyāna, Kumbhakarṇa is killed by Lakṣmaṇa (Mbh 3.27.11-12), while in the Rāmāyana he is killed by Rāma (R. 6.55).

5. In the Rāmopākhyāna, there is no reference to Hanumat bringing the mount Dronācala with its medicinal plants to revive Lakṣmana hit by Indrajit's missile. The revival of Lakṣmaṇa was effected in the Rāmopākhyāna by Sugrīva with the help of plants available near at hand. The entire incident of Dronācala and its medicinal plants is an innovation introduced by Vālmiki.

6. In the Rāmopākhyāna, Kubera sends magic water to Rāma to enable him to see invisible demons and other objects. Vālmiki does not mention the item of magic water at all.

7. In the Rāmopākhyāna, Avindhya brings Sītā to Rāma's camp after Rāvana was killed. In the Rāmāyana, Rāma sends Hanumat for bringing Sītā to him from Rāvana's palace. When she is brought to Rāma's presence, Rāma tells her that she is free to go anywhere. The repudiation of Sītā is couched in similar fashion in both works.

8. In the Rāmopākhyāna, there is no reference to Sītā proving her chastity by entering into fire. This ordeal of Sītā by throwing herself into fire is a pure innovation of Vālmiki. In the Rāmopākhyāna it is stated that after hearing the words of her repudiation by Rāma in terms

सुवृत्तामसुवृत्ता वाप्यह त्वामद्य मैथिलि ।
नोत्सहे परिभोगाय श्वावलीढ हविर्यथा ॥

Mbh. 3 275 13

On hearing these words, Sītā fell down fainted, Lakṣmana and monkeys were struck dumb, when god Brahmā, followed by several gods like Indra, Agni, Vāyu, Kubera, the seven sages and Daśaratha, appears on the scene. Then Sītā got up and said to Rāma

राजपुत्र न ते कोप करोमि विदिता हि मे ।
गतिः स्त्रीणां नराणां च शृणु चेदं वचो मम ॥
अन्तश्चरन्ति भूतानां मातरिश्वा सदागतिः ।
स मे विमुञ्चतु प्राणान्यदि पापं चराम्यहम् ॥

Mbh 3 275. 22-23

Upon this utterance, it is Vāyu,—I ask the reader to note that it was not Agni as in the Rāmāyana—who said

भो भो राघव सत्यं वै वायुरस्मि सदागतिः ।
अपापा मैथिली राजन्सगच्छ सह भार्यया ॥

Mbh 3. 275 26

After Vāyu, other gods present such as Agni, Varuna, Brahmā, all said in one voice

नात्र शङ्का त्वया कार्या प्रतीच्छेमा महाद्युते ।

Mbh 3 275 34

Then Daśaratha also tells Rāma to go to Ayodhyā with Sītā to take charge of his kingdom. Rāma then agreed, accepted Sītā and went to Ayodhyā in the Puspaka Vimāna

I have given above the account as to how Sītā proved her chastity according to the Rāmopākhyāna. Now I ask the reader to compare the above account and contrast it with that in the Rāmāyana found in Sargas 101-106 of the Yuddhakāṇḍa in the Critical Edition. According to the Rāmāyana, it is Rāma who asks Hanumat to go to Rāvaṇa's palace and inform Sītā that Rāma had killed Rāvaṇa, and Vibhīṣaṇa is put on the throne of Lankā. Sītā then told Hanumat that she would like to see Rāma. Rāma then asked Vibhīṣaṇa to bring Sītā to him bathed and decked. She was brought to Rāma in a palanquin. When she approached Rāma, he was filled with joy—because he won the victory over Rāvaṇa, depression—because Rāvaṇa insulted him by Sītā's abduction, and anger—because Sītā might not have remained chaste in Rāvaṇa's house. When Sītā approached Rāma and addressed him with the usual term Āryaputra, Rāma said to her

यत्कर्तव्यं मनुष्येण धर्षणा परिमार्जता ।
तत्कृतं सकलं सीते शत्रुहस्तादमर्षणात् ॥ R 6 103 13
विदितश्चास्तु भद्रं ते योऽयं रणपरिश्रमः ।
स तीर्णं सुहृदा वीर्यान् त्वदर्थं मया कृतं ॥
रक्षता तु मया वृत्तमपवादं च सर्वशः ।
प्रत्यातस्यात्मवंशस्य न्यङ्गं च परिमार्जता ॥
प्राप्तचारित्र्यसदेहा मम प्रतिमुखे स्थिता ।
दीपो नेत्रातुरस्येव प्रतिकूलासि मे दृढम् ॥
तद्वच्छ ह्यभ्यनुज्ञाता यथेष्टं जनकात्मजे ।
एतां दशं दिशो भद्रे कार्यमस्ति न मे त्वया ॥

R 6 103 15-18

On hearing this repudiation by Rāma, Sītā told him that he was doing injustice to her and argued

त्वया तु नरशार्दूल क्रोधमेवानुवर्तता ।
लघुनेव मनुष्येण स्त्रीत्वमेव पुरस्कृतम् ॥
अपदेशेन जनकाद्योत्पत्तिर्वसुधातलात् ।
मम वृत्तं च वृत्तज्ञ बहु ते न पुरस्कृतम् ॥
न प्रमाणीकृतं पाणिर्बाल्ये बालेन पीडितं ।
मम भक्तिश्च शीलं च सर्वं ते पृष्ठतं कृतम् ॥

R 6 104 14-16

So saying, Sītā made up her mind to end her life by entering into burning fire in the presence of Rāma and other members of the gathering, and told Laksmana

चिता मे कुरु सौमित्रे व्यसनस्यास्य भेषजम् ।
मिथ्यापवादोपहृता नाह जीवितुमुत्सहे ॥
अप्रीतस्य गुणैर्भर्तुस्त्यक्तया जनससदि ।
या क्षमा मे गतिर्गन्तु प्रवेक्ष्ये हव्यवाहनम् ॥

R. 6 104 18-19

Laksmana then looked up to Rāma, and gathering from his face his consent to the proposal of Sītā, he prepared a burning pile Sītā approached the pile and said

यथा मे हृदयं नित्यं नापसर्पति राघवात् ।
तथा लोकस्य साक्षी मा सर्वतः पातु पावक ॥

R 6 104. 24

So saying, Sītā approached the fire regardless of her life. Then all gods appeared on the scene and appealed to Rāma not to be so indifferent to Sītā who was throwing herself into the fire. The gods also pointed to Rāma that he was the lord of all gods, Visnu incarnate. Rāma thereupon told gods that had gathered that he considered himself to be a human being, the son of Daśaratha

आत्मानं मानुषं मन्ये राम दशरथात्मजम् ।

R 6 105.10

Just at this juncture the god of fire in person jumped up from the burning pile with Sītā on his lap, gave her to Rāma and said

विशुद्धभावा निष्पापा प्रतिगृह्णीष्व राघव ।
न किञ्चिदभिघातव्यमहमाज्ञापयामि ते ॥

R 6 106 9

To this Rāma responded

अवश्यं त्रिषु लोकेषु सीता पावनमर्हति ।
दीर्घकालोपिता चेय रावणान्तं पुरे शुभा ॥
बालिशं सखं कामात्मा रामो दशरथात्मज ।
इति वक्ष्यन्ति मा सन्तो जानकीमविशोध्य हि ॥
अनन्यहृदया भक्ता मच्चित्तपरिरक्षिणीम् ।
अहमप्यवगच्छामि मैथिलीं जनकात्मजाम् ॥
प्रत्ययार्थं तु लोकानां त्रयाणां सत्यसश्रय ।
उपेक्षे चापि वैदेहीं प्रविशन्तीं हुताशनम् ॥

R 6 106 11-14

It is now clear from the above narration that Vālmīki introduced this episode of Sītā's purification by fire against the narration in the Rāmopākhyāna where Vāyu is said to be the first to announce the purity of Sītā. Whether Sītā actually threw herself into the fire, or was approaching (प्रविशन्तीं) the burning fire when personified Agni caught her and brought her to Rāma, is still a moot question, because once we get the text to say प्रविशेत् हुताशनम् and next उपेक्षे चापि वैदेहीं प्रविशन्तीं हुताशनम्. In any case, the poet Vālmiki introduced in his epic poem an innovation of Sītā's test by fire against the epic and historical background of Vāyu assuring Rāma of Sītā's purity. This innovation, among others, is thus the most striking innovation made by Vālmiki when he decided to handle an old epic theme and gave it the shape of a poem, the first of its kind, an Ādikāvya. We are not so much interested in the fact whether Sītā threw herself into the fire, came out unhurt, and was presented to Rāma by fire-god, because we believe that Vāyu appearing on the scene and declaring Sītā's purity, and Agni bringing Sītā to Rāma and presenting her to him unhurt or brighter are facts equally super-natural to us. We are, therefore, concerned more with changes or innovations introduced by the poet Vālmiki in his poem against a historical statement made in the Rāmopākhyāna of the Mahābhārata.

The above story of Rāma as found in the Rāmopākhyāna of the Mahābhārata, traditionally known as the Itihāsa, and the same in Vālmiki's Rāmāyana, traditionally known as Ādikāvya, the first poem, deserves some further general considerations. Itihāsa and Purānas in Indian literature and poems like Vālmiki's Rāmāyana are all mixed up with historical grains and myths. The Rāmopākhyāna which is a part and parcel of a work called Itihāsa, requires Vāyu personified to announce the purity and chastity of Sītā. Vālmiki, however, shows greater height of imagination in putting Vāyu in the background and invent the fire-ordeal to prove Sītā's purity, because fire is visible while Vāyu is invisible. The incident as narrated in the Itihāsa looks insipid against the fire-ordeal which can catch the public mind more quickly. Has not thus Vālmiki modified the statement made in the Itihāsa to make his poem more impressive than the insipid record in Itihāsa? In this context, I may bring to the reader's notice a recent article in Marathi by Mm. Dr. V. V. MIRASHI which appeared in the Journal Nava Bharata for July 1970 (the original article in English by him may soon appear in some research journal) in which Dr. MIRASHI studies the question of the episode known as Pārjātaharana as it figures in the Critical Text of Harivamśa and as modified by a poet of a later date, king Sarvasena (A D 330-355) of the Vākātaka dynasty. The oldest form of the episode of Pārjātaharana is found in the Mbh 7.10 22-23 and runs as follows:

वेनतेय समारह्य त्रासयित्वामरावतीम् ।
महेन्द्रभवनद्वीरः पारिजातमुपानयत् ॥
तच्च मर्षितवान्शक्रो जानस्तस्य पराक्रमम् ।
राज्ञा चाप्यजित कच्चिकृष्णेनेह न शुश्रुम ॥

This very episode figures in Harivamśa (92 63-67) in its Critical Edition as follows

स ददर्श महाबाहुराश्रीडे वामवस्य ह ।
दिव्यमभ्यर्चितं देवैः पारिजात महाद्रुमम् ॥
उत्पाद्याग्रेपयामास विष्णुस्त गरुडोपरि ।
सोऽपश्यत्सत्यभामा च दिव्यमप्सरसा गणम् ॥
... ..
श्रुत्वा त देवराजस्तु कर्म कृष्णस्य तत्तदा ।
अनुमेने महाबाहु कृतकर्मैति चाब्रवीत् ॥

The same episode figures in Kṣemendra's Bhāṇata Mañjarī as follows

त दृष्ट्वा नयनानन्दवान्धव माधव स्वयम् ।
समुत्पाद्य जहाराशु तच्चात्मन्यत वृत्रहा ॥

Now this plain story of Pārjātaharana assumes altogether a different form in king Sarvasena's Prakrit poem Harivijaya (A D 330-355) where the element of jealousy between Rukminī and Satyabhāmā is introduced for the first time as well as a full-fledged battle between Indra and Kṛṣṇa over this tree. Here also a historical statement in the Harivamśa is given a new twist. Ānandavardhana in his Dhvanyāloka III has noted this fact in the following form

इतिवृत्तवशायाता कथचिद्वसाननुगुणा स्थितिं त्यक्त्वा पुनरुद्भेदय जभीष्टरसोचितकथोज्जयो विधेयः यथा कालिदासप्रबन्धेषु यथा च सर्वसेनविरचिते हरिविजये ।

On the above passage Abhinavagupta in Locana remarks

हरित्रिजये कान्तानुनयाद्भवेन पारिजातहरण निरूपितम् इतिहासेष्वहमपि ।

It is thus clear that king Sarvasena, the author of the Prakrit poem ( now lost or not yet traced ) narrated the story of Pārjāta-harana as subordinate to his appeasing Satyabhāmā who was jealous of Rukmīnī whom Kṛṣṇa gave the pārijāta flower, though there is no reference to such an event in the Itihāsa, i.e. Mahābhārata. This clue has, since the days of king Sarvasena, been utilized by over a dozen poets in Sanskrit literature down to 17th century. Our poet Vālmīki has done a similar thing in his epic poem Rāmāyana, even though he took the main story of Rāma from the Itihāsa, i.e. the Rāmopākhyāna of the Mahābhārata.

We have not yet studied the question how myths in literature grow. Vālmīki picked the main theme of the Rāmāyana for his epic poem from the Mahābhārata, and gave a new turn by introducing new features like Viśvāmitra episode, the bringing of Dronācala by Hanumat, and the fire-ordeal of Sītā, following the dictum कुर्यान्निर्वहणेऽद्भुतम् i.e., the poet should introduce supernatural elements towards the concluding part of his poem or play. The coming out of Sītā from the burning fire is that miraculous event now perpetuated in Indian literature.

I may briefly point out here that like the fire-ordeal of the Rāmāyana and assuaging the jealousy of co-wives as in the Pārjāta-harana, there are several such episodes like the story of Syamantaka gem which Prasena discovered on the foreshore at a time when Dvārakā was founded. This discovery of Syamantaka, in another later version, was said to be a present to Prasena by the sun god. This gem has gathered several myths around it including that of not looking at the moon on the fourth day of Bhādrapada, though the Critical Text of Harivamśa makes no reference to it and narrates the simple fact that Prasena discovered the gem on the fore-shore of Dvārakā. The narration of the life of Kṛṣṇa in Harivamśa is already full of a number of myths, but it is to be noted that these myths are amplified in the Bhāgavata Purāna and Bramavaivarta Purāna.

I have already digressed from my main point, viz., Vālmīki introduced for the first time the episode of Sītā's fire-ordeal in his poem Rāmāyana, though the older narrative makes no reference to it. Sītā on that account rose in estimation of popular mind as having undergone through the most miraculous form of expiation for her stay in Rāvana's house. This is the greatest feat and height of imagination of the poetic genius of Vālmīki.

I should not close this Introduction of the Yuddhakāṇḍa without recording my grateful and sincere thanks to those persons who entrusted this work to me and who actively helped me in my editorial task from beginning to end during a long period of nine years. In fact, I feel very much over-whelmed by their kindness when on conclusion of my labour I find how my role has been insignificant compared with an enormous quantity of quality labour these persons bestowed upon the production of this volume of the Yuddhakāṇḍa. It is obviously difficult for me to mention all names, but I am all along conscious of their kind help to me.

I should like to record, in the first place, my grateful thanks to Dr Shrimatī Hansaben Mehta, the first Vice-Chancellor of the Maharaja Sayajirao University of Baroda as Chairman of the Editorial Board, for the project of the Critical Edition of the Rāmāyana, who, without any acquaintance, accepted my name first for the membership of the Board and then for the editorship of two of the bigger Kāṇḍas of the Rāmāyana, viz., the Ayodhyākāṇḍa and the Yuddhakāṇḍa, on the recommendation of my friend, the late Professor Govindalal H. BHATT, the first General Editor of this project. After the sad and rather untimely demise of Professor BHATT, his successor, Dr U P SHAH, has also been equally kind to me, and advised me and sought my advice in all my and his difficulties in the editorial task. My heartfelt thanks go to Dr U P SHAH. For the preparation of the constituted text of the Ayodhyākāṇḍa, I spent days and months at Baroda, but for the Yuddhakāṇḍa, I could not do so, on account of my other assignment, viz, the General Editorship of the Mahābhārata at the Bhandarkar Oriental Research Institute, Poona. The late Professor BHATT then arranged, with the consent of his authorities, to send the collation-sheets to Poona to suit my convenience. The work of constituting the text of the Yuddhakāṇḍa was thus done in my spare time and completed in December 1964 and it may be out by March 1971. During this process of editorial task and printing, difficulties arose which had to be settled by correspondence. Dr U. P. SHAH's help to me in this regard is great and valuable, and I must record my special thanks to him for his untiring energy. Dr U. P. SHAH was ably assisted by Shri M. R. NAMBIYAR, the Assistant Editor, by Shri H. T. DESAI for sometime as well as by messrs Dr B. N. BHATT, NIRGUDKAR and others. Obviously, I must say once more, that the Critical Edition of a text like the Rāmāyana is not the work of an individual but of a team, and the successful completion of it depends upon the staff, prepared to give its best to the General Editor. I consider myself lucky in having a staff which rendered my work easy and light. I, therefore, like to record my grateful thanks to them individually and collectively. Lastly, I must not miss to record my best thanks to the staff of the University Press who have spared no pains to make the printing of this volume excellent in their usual way. Finally, I cannot close this Introduction without recording my humble gratitude to God Almighty who spared me to my eightieth year to complete this job.

ॐ तत्सत् । ब्रह्मार्पणमस्तु ।

In S<sub>1</sub> N̄ V<sub>1</sub> B D<sub>3</sub> १११२, Sargas 1-15 form part of the Sundarākāṇḍa. In these MSS the Yuddhākāṇḍa begins with Sarga 16.

In V<sub>2</sub>, Sargas 1-15 are not found. The MS begins with Sarga 16.

V<sub>3</sub> is a new MS wherein Sargas 1-15 are not found. The variants recorded as of V<sub>2</sub> for Sargas 1-15 are from a different MS (viz V<sub>2</sub> of the Sundara) in which the Sundarākāṇḍa incorporates these fifteen Sargas and then comes to an end.

For Sargas 1-15, B<sub>2</sub> and B<sub>4</sub> are the same as B<sub>3</sub> and B<sub>4</sub> respy of the Sundara. However, from Sarga 16 onwards B<sub>2</sub> and B<sub>4</sub> are different MSS.

In D<sub>1</sub> and D<sub>4</sub>, Sargas 1-31 belong to the Sundarākāṇḍa. As such, D<sub>4</sub> begins the Yuddhākāṇḍa with Sarga 32. But in D<sub>1</sub>, the Yuddhākāṇḍa begins with Sarga 16 (and not with Sarga 32). Consequently Sargas 16-31 are duplicated in it (vide note in Sarga 16).

In D<sub>2</sub>, the Yuddhākāṇḍa begins with Sarga 6 as Sargas 1-5 therein belong to the Sundara.

D<sub>5</sub> begins with श्रीगणेशाय नमः । हरि ॐ ।

D<sub>6</sub> begins with श्रीमते रामानुजाय नमः and then ins some introductory stanzas beginning with स जयति रघुवशतिलकः कौशल्यहृदयनदनो राम etc.

D<sub>7</sub> begins with ॐ

D<sub>9</sub> begins with केपुचित्तपुस्तकेषु श्रुत्वा हनुमतो वाक्य-
 मिदमारभ्य युद्धकाण्डारभ उच्यते

D<sub>10</sub> begins with युद्धकाण्डविधिपत्रे ४ । श्रीगणेशाय नमः । and then ins. the पारायणविधि of the Yuddhākāṇḍa.
